Assessing English Language Learners in the Content Areas

A Research-into-Practice Guide for Educators

University of Michigan Press Assessing English Language Learners in the Content Areas: A Research-into-Practice Guide for Educators seeks to provide guidance to classroom teachers, staff developers, and test-item designers who want to improve ELL assessment outcomes, particularly in the areas of math, science and social studies. The first two chapters of the book establish the background for the discussion of content-area assessment for ELLs, examining several important characteristics of this rapidly growing student population (as well as critical legislation affecting ELLs) and providing a description of various forms of assessment, including how ELL assessment is different from the assessment of English-proficient students. Important assessment principles that educators should use in their evaluation of tests or other forms of measurement are provided. Other chapters review ELL test accommodations nationwide (because, surprisingly, most teachers do not know what they can and cannot allow) and the research on the effectiveness of these types of accommodations. The book analyzes the characteristics of alternative assessment; it discusses three popular alternative assessment instruments (performance assessment, curriculum-based measurement, and portfolios) and makes recommendations as to how to increase the validity, reliability, and practicality of alternative assessments. The book proposes fundamental assessment practices to help content area teachers in their evaluation of their ELL progress.

Standards-Based Accountability Under No Child Left Behind

Experiences of Teachers and Administrators in Three States

Rand Corporation Since 2001-2002, standards-based accountability provisions of the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 have shaped the work of public school teachers and administrators in the United States. Cochrane Handbook for Systematic Reviews of Interventions

Wiley Healthcare providers, consumers, researchers and policy makers are inundated with unmanageable amounts of information, including evidence from healthcare research. It has become impossible for all to have the time and resources to find, appraise and interpret this evidence and incorporate it into healthcare decisions. Cochrane Reviews respond to this challenge by identifying, appraising and synthesizing research-based evidence and presenting it in a standardized format, published in The Cochrane Library (www.thecochranelibrary.com). The Cochrane Handbook for Systematic Reviews of Interventions contains methodological guidance for the preparation and maintenance of Cochrane intervention reviews. Written in a clear and accessible format, it is the essential manual for all those preparing, maintaining and reading Cochrane reviews. Many of the principles and methods described here are appropriate for systematic reviews applied to other types of research and to systematic reviews of interventions undertaken by others. It is hoped therefore that this book will be invaluable to all those who want to understand the role of systematic reviews, critically appraise published reviews or perform reviews themselves.

The State of State English Standards, 2005

The importance of state academic standards soared in January 2002 with passage of the No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB). Not only does that milestone law require all states to have demanding academic standards in place and to demonstrate steady student progress toward academic proficiency as set forth in those standards, it also links states' accountability for increasing students' achievement to the quality of their teachers. The Higher Education Act also asks states to report annually on pass rates on licensure tests taken by prospective teachers and on how their K-12 standards relate to their teacher-preparation program standards. For the first time in U.S. history, these key elements of our public-education system are joined--and they are all joined to state academic standards that set forth what K-12 students are expected to learn in core subjects. The quality of those standards thus matters more than ever before. In this review, that quality is appraised in 2005 in reading and English language arts, arguably the most basic and consequential subject of all. Do states' current standards expect what they should? Are they demanding enough? Clear enough? Faithful to what is known about how students learn? And are states using them to guide not only the curriculum and assessment system for students but also their teacher-training programs, the tests that they require of prospective teachers, and their professional development activities for current teachers? This report answers those and many more questions about reading and English standards in 49 states and the District of Columbia. (Iowa has no state standards.) In addition to official standards documents, a wide variety of supplemental materials were reviewed against 34 criteria organized into six major categories. Criteria were scored on a 4-point scale and grade point averages were converted to letter grades. Appended are: (1) The 2005 Review Form and Methodology; (2) Criteria, Rationales, and State Results; (3) Unteachable Literature Standards; (4) Strong Literature Standards; and (5) Tables. [Report also produced by the Thomas B. Fordham Institute. Foreword by Chester E. Finn, Jr.]

Cancer and Aging

Karger Medical and Scientific Publishers Cancer is clearly an age-related disease. Recent research in both aging and cancer has demonstrated the complex interaction between the two phenomena. This affects a wide spectrum of research and practice, anywhere from basic research to health care organization. Core examples of these close associations are addressed in this book. Starting with basic research, the first chapters cover cancer development, mTOR inhibition, senescent cells altering the tumor microenvironment, and immune senescence affecting cancer vaccine response. Taking into account the multidisciplinary of geriatric oncology, several chapters focus on geriatric and oncologic aspects in patient assessment, treatment options, nursing and exercise programs. The book is rounded off by a discussion on the impact of the metabolic syndrome illustrating the interactions between comorbidity and cancer and a chapter on frailty. This book provides the reader with insights that will hopefully foster his or her reflection in their own research and practice to further the development of this most exciting field. Given the aging of the population worldwide and the high prevalence of cancer, it is essential reading not only for oncologists and geriatricians but for all health practitioners.

Making Big Schools Feel Small

Multiage Grouping, Looping, and Schools-within-a-school

National Middle School Assn Increasing numbers of middle school educators believe that the education of young adolescents can be enhanced when teachers and students are members of classrooms and small team groups characterized by long-lasting relationships. This book describes how to offer students the benefits of smallness within increasingly larger schools by ensuring long-term teacher-student relationships. Three major ways of achieving such relationships are detailed: (1) multiage grouping; (2) looping; and (3) schools-within-a-school. Research on middle school organizational patterns is summarized. Also presented are the findings of a national survey on long-term teacher-student relationships that gathered the opinions of 105 educators, 586 parents, and 1,100 students from 33 schools. Guidelines for practitioners interested in implementing long-term teacher-student relationships to make big schools seem small conclude the book. (Contains 53 references.) (KB)
